

Hawaii's Lemon Law

The Lemon Law helps consumers resolve car warranty complaints with manufacturers. Under certain conditions, a consumer is entitled to receive a refund or a replacement for a car that has a nonconformity.

What is a nonconformity?

A nonconformity is a defect or condition that does not conform to the car's warranty and that substantially impairs the use, market value, or safety of the car. This does not include a defect or condition that results from an accident, abuse, neglect, or modification of the car by persons other than the manufacturer or its authorized dealer.

Substantially impairs means to make the car unfit, unreliable, or unsafe for warranted or normal use, or to greatly diminish the value of the car. An annoying rattle or vibration may not be serious enough to make your car a lemon.

Is my car a "lemon"?

It may be if all of the following are true:

- You purchased your car in Hawaii from a dealership;
- You use your car for personal, family, or household purposes;
- Your car has a warranty-related nonconformity that substantially impairs the use, value, or safety of the car;

- You notified the manufacturer in writing about the nonconformity during the period of the warranty and within two years after delivery of the car to you or within the first 24,000 miles of operation, whichever occurs first (This is called the Lemon Law Rights Period);
- One of the following happened within the Lemon Law Rights Period:
  - the same nonconformity was subject to exam or repair at least three times and the problem continues; or
  - the nonconformity was subject to exam or repair at least once but continues to be a nonconformity likely to cause death or serious bodily injury; or
  - the car was out of service for repair for one or more non-conformities for a total of 30 or more business days.

What should I do if I think I have a lemon?

- Get a repair order every time you take your car in for repair even if the repair dealership can't diagnose or fix the problem. The repair order should show the problem you reported, the odometer reading, the date when the car was brought in for repair, and the date when the car was ready for pickup.
- Keep your purchase contract, warranties, repair orders, letters, and notes from conversations with service personnel.

- Read over the Lemon Law Statement of Rights form that should have been given to you when you bought the car. Use the address given for the manufacturer's representative when you write to the manufacturer.
- Write to the manufacturer describing the defect, the name and address of the repair dealership, the number of times the car was brought in, the odometer reading, and your name, address, and phone number. Ask for a refund or replacement car. Send the letter by certified mail, with a return receipt requested. Save the return receipt when it comes back.
- Although not required, it is reasonable to allow the manufacturer 10-14 days from the date it receives your notification to cure the problem.
- Continue to make your monthly payments on your financed or leased car.
- File a demand for arbitration with the State Certified Arbitration Program (SCAP) of the Department of Commerce and Consumer Affairs within one year after the Lemon Law Rights Period has expired, and pay the $50 filing fee. You do not need a lawyer, but you must prepare and present your evidence to the neutral arbitrator to prove your case. The arbitrator then decides if the manufacturer must repurchase or replace the car. If you win your case, you get back your $50 filing fee.

For more information, contact the Consumer Resource Center at (808) 587-3222.

If you are calling from the Neighbor Islands, call via the state toll free telephone number for Kauai 274-3141 extension 73222; the Big Island 974-4000 extension 73222; Maui 984-2400 extension 73222; Molokai and Lanai 1-800-468-4644 extension 73222.

The language of this brochure is for informational purposes only. This brochure is intended as a reference and does not provide legal advice. The information contained in this brochure is subject to change.

This printed material can be made available for individuals with special needs in braille, large print or audio tape. Please submit your request to the Complaints and Enforcement Officer at 586-2666.

Call the DCCA Consumer Resource Center at 587-3222 for further information on the State Certified Arbitration Program.

HAWAII LEMON LAW

